Seed to Harvest

Lesson for April 29, 1984
Bible Study Passages: James 1:2-8, 12-21

INTRODUCTION

"Show me a faith that is alive and I'll show you a faith that does good works." This is the theme that permeates the Book of James. Many have thought that James wrote his epistle to refute Paul's emphasis upon faith as the basis of Christian theology. But James was not opposed to Pauls theme of sola fide (faith only). James believed strongly in a faith that demonstrated itself in righteous living.

Jesus himself did not spend all of his energy teaching theology; he demonstrated through behavior the importance of ministry in action. Jesus taught us through word and deed that the disciple is to live out his/her faith in an exemplary life-style.

Belief is important; acting out one's belief in care for others is equally important. For the next few weeks we will study the relevance of James for the Christian's life-style. I think we will discover a sound basis for our ministry with others.

JOY IN TROUBLESOME TIMES (James 1:2-4)

James warns that even Christians will find themselves in trouble from time to time. We cannot measure out Christian goodness by the lack of troubles. James argues that we must take care not to conclude that troubles are payment in kind for sin. He also argues against receiving troubles as a sign of God's displeasure towards us. James believes that troubles can be rewarding, a kind of "highway" whereby we reach greater distance (maturity). Troubles sort of tamper our faith and trust in God. The troubles that come our way do not come to test us; they come in the midst of our fragile nature and challenge us to grow. Troubles discipline us and prepare us to receive the reward of faith that comes through endurance. Troubles test us to "hand in there" even when life appears hopeless.

KEEPING A STABE SHIP (James 1:5-8)

The Christian uses his/her faith to help them arrive at difficult answers to perplexing problems. James utilizes the wind and wave to describe an unstable man. He describes a doubleminded person as one who goes in many directions. He is talking about the person who fails to make important decisions.

James pictures the unstable person as one who faces difficult decisions but does not know what to do. He argues that true wisdom comes through faith and persistent prayer.

STRUGGLES WITH TEMPTATION (James 1:12-15)

Temptation has a way of trying our commitment. We humans are easily seduced into temptation. We can say with Flip Wilson, "The devil made me do it." We don't always need the "devil" to entice us into sin because we are often tempted by our own lusts. Thus, James places the responsibility of our actions squarely upon our shoulders. We are responsible for our sin.

Sin for James is giving one's highest thoughts to life's second best and arranging one's life around self, excluding Christ from the center.

MERCIES AND GIFTS FROM GOD (James 1:16-21)

Too otter we measure success in life by the things we possess. James is repulsed by ingratitude and argues that "all good gifts come from God." When we abuse these gifts (including spouses, children, friends), we are rejecting God's gifts. Even our bodies are gifts from God. To abuse our body is to abuse a gift from the father. It is God who gives and we are always on the receiving end.

Life is a gift of God that is meant to be lived in an attitude of praise and celebration!
